

Abstract Ellen Grav Ellingsen

One mammoth, heavy water and a tiny moon rock

University collections cover a huge variety of objects, based on the University's focus of interest throughout time. The collections are important artefacts that are part of a history, sometimes with importance for the whole nation's history. Still, as Norway's largest university, we do have a problem getting the faculties and the institutes to prioritize the University Collection project. How can we turn our collections into a project worth spending some precious work time on?

This presentation will focus on how to make the University Collections visible and useful, in a way that hopefully will make the different units at NTNU want to collect their own history. By using public outreach efforts like blog posts, videos, student projects, stunt exhibitions and artworks we hope to give our project a much needed boost.

Key words: public outreach – video – blog posts – video projects – stunt exhibitions

Ellen Grav Ellingsen

Arkeolog/Senioringeniør
Prosjektleder Universitetshistoriske samlinger NTNU

NTNU Vitenskapsmuseet

e-post: ellen.ellingsen@ntnu.no

Tlf. 92481111

I need to show a Power point presentation, including a video with sound